

What is the role of restitution? Views from academics

Prof
Tinyiko
Maluleke -
Executive Director, Research,

UNISA

Restitution is an acknowledgement that unjust and broken human relations are historical, material, spiritual and all encompassing – affecting blacks and white, rich and poor, men and women, straight and gay... (Read More)

Dr Jaco
Bernard-
Naude - University of Cape Town

Versoening gaan oor die aanvaarding, aan beide kante, van 'n ongelykheid en die toewyding aan 'n ideaal van gelykheid sonder gelyke. (Read more)

Prof Francis
Wilson

When you think strategically about this gap the three areas that really matters in the restitution process are education, the restructuring of the economy and specifically the mining industry and finding ways of releasing energy for those who are living on the land so that they can use the land more effectively. (Read more)

Dr Sharlene
Swartz, HSRC

Restitution recognises that to truly set things right, these consequences of Apartheid must be systematically dealt with. Beneficiaries of Apartheid, ...must compensate people for the losses in opportunity, investment and self-betterment that may have come their way had they had the means to take advantage of them. (Read more)